The aorist tense is formed from the third principal part of the verb. For the verbs we have studied, the third principal part is formed by adding an augment to the beginning of the stem, as in the imperfect tense, and a sigma to the end of the stem, as in the future tense. The aorist tense uses its own set of endings; notice that five of the forms include α in the ending. The endings all end in short vowels, which means that the accentuation will be the same as it is in the imperfect tense. The accent will always appear on the antepenult of the verb.

The aorist tense is the simple past tense. It is translated as did; for example, ἔλυσα = I released; ἔγραψα = I wrote.

There is no aorist tense of the verb εἰμί.
